This is the gripping memoir of a LRRP team leader during the Vietnam War. It is a story of courage, leadership, and the human experience of war.

The author, a young Army lieutenant, was assigned to lead a Long Range Reconnaissance Patrol (LRRP) team in 1968. LRRPs were small, highly trained teams of soldiers who conducted long-range reconnaissance missions behind enemy lines. They were often the first to make contact with the enemy, and they played a vital role in gathering intelligence and providing early warning of enemy movements.

The author's team was inserted into enemy territory on a variety of missions, including reconnaissance, surveillance, and ambushes. They faced danger at every turn, and they often had to fight their way out of enemy ambushes.

The author's memoir is a vivid and compelling account of his experiences as a LRRP team leader. He recounts the challenges and dangers he and his team faced, and he shares the stories of the brave men who served with him.

This book is a must-read for anyone interested in military history, leadership, or the human experience of war. It is a story of courage, sacrifice, and the indomitable spirit of the American soldier.

About the Author

The author is a retired Army officer who served in the Vietnam War. He was awarded the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, and the Purple Heart for his actions in combat. He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point and the Harvard Kennedy School.
