The book is divided into four parts. The first part, "Theories and Methodologies of Travel Writing," explores the different ways in which scholars have approached the study of travel writing. The second part, "Travels in the Pre-Modern Period," examines the earliest accounts of travel in the Arabian Peninsula, as well as the travelogues of medieval Arab scholars and merchants. The third part, "Travels in the Modern Period," looks at the ways in which travel has been influenced by the rise of European colonialism and the development of modern transportation and communication technologies. The fourth part, "Travels in the Contemporary Period," examines the experiences of contemporary Arab travelers, and it explores the ways in which travel has become a more accessible and globalized experience.

Of Travels is a valuable resource for anyone interested in Arabic literature, travel, or the history of the Middle East. The book provides a comprehensive overview of the field, and it offers a wealth of insights into the ways in which travel has shaped the Arabic literary tradition.
