

Traveling With People You Want to Punch in the Throat

Traveling with friends and family can be a wonderful experience, but it can also be a major source of stress. After all, you're confined to close quarters with people who may have very different travel styles, interests, and expectations. And if you're not careful, you can end up spending more time arguing with your travel companions than actually enjoying your trip.

In her new book, Traveling With People You Want to Punch in the Throat, Jen Sincero takes a humorous and honest look at the challenges of traveling with others. She shares her own experiences of traveling with her husband, her friends, and her family, and she offers practical advice on how to deal with everything from snoring roommates to lost luggage.
